HILTON VANDERHORN ARCHITECTS

Located in Greenwich, Connecticut, this Georgian style pool house represents just one phase of a design relationship that has spanned seventeen years between the architectural firm of Hilton Vanderhorn and their client. erator. Three panel bi-fold doors allow you to close off the kitchen from the central portion. In the opposing section, the well proportioned powder room opens to changing rooms and like the kitchen has limestone flooring and bead board walls. Fixtures are by Waterworks.

Designed to match the main house, oversized bricks were handmade using a mixture of Glengarry and Old Carolina brick. Doric columns support the pergola which covers the entertaining area and joins the two sections of the pool house. A copper roof, rafter tails and lattice panel on the rear of the space add to the charm. The outdoor design also includes a grilling area and pizza oven. The pool is finished with limestone coping and a blue-stone terrace.

Behind the pool house and down a set of stone stairs, Mercury strikes a noble pose. Is he heralding your arrival or bidding you farewell?
